ESSENTIAL. BENEFICIAL. SUSTAINABLE.

In the Santa Cruz/Watsonville Region, the aggregates and construction industry are leading drivers of the regional economy, creating well-paying jobs for residents, generating revenue for local jurisdictions and providing essential benefits to all.

The aggregates sector supplies sand, gravel and crushed stone for local construction. Millions of tons of aggregates are required to build and maintain our infrastructure, including roads, homes, buildings, schools and public works.

The direct and indirect impacts of this sector, while not often publicly reported, are enormous.

Real economic impacts. The aggregates and construction industry generates $2.04 billion in total economic output in the Santa Cruz/Watsonville Region. That’s 8.8% of the region’s total economic output. Santa Cruz/Watsonville Region’s per capita impact is $7,394 - #4 in California. Aggregates alone provide $29.2 million in economic impact which is $106 per capita.

Real impact on jobs and wages. Aggregate and construction workers in the Santa Cruz/Watsonville Region earn $1.06 billion annually. Average income is $119,411 which is well above average wages for the region.

Every job created in the aggregates and construction industries results in another 1.40 jobs in other industries.

Real impact on government revenue. Industry employers pay nearly half a billion dollars ($494M) to federal, state and local taxes, providing local government essential revenue to repair roads, develop schools and improve public services.

Real local benefits. A ready supply of affordable, local construction materials increases the likelihood of building and reduces the cost of new development of affordable housing in the Santa Cruz/Watsonville Region. It also helps reduce consumer costs, road wear and tear, and traffic congestion as well as lowering emissions and greenhouse gases.

The value of the aforementioned benefits for local residents, businesses and government agencies is unmeasureable but certainly essential to the local economy.

Real need for local aggregates. Ensuring an adequate local supply of high-quality building materials for the Santa Cruz/Watsonville Region’s future is critical to maintaining the massive economic impacts and quality of life we enjoy. And essential to facilitate future employment growth and the billions of dollars coming for major transportation infrastructure improvements approved by voters.
