California Construction And Industrial Materials Association

ADAM HARPER

Director of Environmental and Land Use Policy

Adam Harper joined the California Construction and Industrial Materials Association upon its founding in 2007, having worked since 1999 for a predecessor association. Adam brings over 26 years of association management experience to his work for our members.

In his nearly three decades of experience working on policy and advocacy in Sacramento, Adam has developed specialized expertise in the areas of natural resource development and land use policy along with air quality and water resource policies and permitting. He has coordinated producer analysis and advocacy efforts on mining law modernization, off road equipment, industrial stormwater, local and statewide dust rules before both the legislature and state agencies departments boards and commissions. He regularly interfaces with statewide policymakers on the broad scope of policies which impact the construction and industrial material producers in California. He supports the association's focus of developing and supporting pragmatic implementable solutions to the priorities of California policy.

Adam is a graduate of California State University Sacramento with a degree in Government/International Affairs and a minor in Anthropology where he participated in the Sacramento Semester Program serving an Internship with the State Legislature.
