JULIA MALDONADO

Communications Coordinator

Julia Maldonado joined the California Construction and Industrial Materials Association in 2021 right out of college. Her expertise lies in reporting, photography, copy editing, web editing, speech writing and presenting, and newspaper design.

For CalcIMA, Julia is responsible for coordinating and writing for The Conveyor magazine, running CalcIMA's social media, managing websites, working on the Weekly Update through writing and design, designing educational documents.

She also works closely with Summit Strategy Group to create and implement a communications strategy for CalcIMA. If it's communications related, she probably has worked on it.

Julia has a master's degree in communication studies and bachelor's degree in journalism, both from California State University, Chico. She held multiple editor positions, including editor-in-chief, at her university's newspaper, The Orion. She interned with North State Public Radio and served as a fellow for National Public Radio and Capital Public Radio.

When not at CalcIMA, Julia enjoys watching and writing about anime as part of her volunteer content creation position at Anime Fire. She enjoys running, playing volleyball, and visiting the park with her partner Miguel and their dog, Endeavor.
