

CHARLEY REA

Vice President of Policy and Communications

Charley Rea joined the California Construction and Industrial Materials Association upon its founding in 2007. Previously, he served the industry as executive director with the Construction Materials Association of California (CMAC) and with the California Mining Association. He has over 35 years experience with congressional, federal, corporate, and trade associations in transportation and natural resources issues, including 25 years of association management experience.

For CalcIMA, Charley Rea works on specification, transportation, health and safety, human resources, operational, and natural resources issues, as well as writing the weekly newsletter. Activities for the mining and concrete industries include legislative and regulatory issues regarding recycling of construction materials, material testing and qualification, plant automation, building standards, safety standards, and prevailing wage.

Charley Rea serves in liaison positions with Caltrans' Pavement & Materials Management Committee (PMPC), Caltrans' Joint Training and Certification Program (JTCP), regional office of the Mine Safety and Health Administration, and the Yolo County Producers Council.
