California Construction And Industrial Materials Association

CAMERON RICHARDSON

Director of Technical Affairs

Cameron Richardson joined the California Construction and Industrial Materials Association in 2024. His expertise lies in working in materials, sustainability, estimating, pavement technologies, performance, and quality control, to name a few.

Cameron is from Long Beach, California and received his MBA from University of Phoenix, Southern California Campus. An opportunity to be a quality manager with a CalcIMA producer member, and one of the largest construction material producers in California, brought Cameron to Northern California in 2016. He has previous experience with one of CalcIMA's Climate Tech associate members, where he helped asphalt producers innovate with more sustainable processes while elevating material performance.

When not at CalcIMA, Cameron enjoys cooking and spending time with his family. He loves coaching his kids in different team sports, such as basketball, baseball or football and teaching them different skills and how to work in a team environment. As for himself, he enjoys playing golf the most. Fun fact: He has a collection of over 70 golf course poker chips from different golf courses where he's played, and has been collecting them since 2019.
